

requiring manufacturers to implant a chip in all future HDTV receivers is unfair. Many people already own a receiver and the result will be lower quality for those of us that own such a receiver. Additionally, should we want to archive shows for later viewing - a practice common today with VCRs - we will encounter problems depending on the equipment own and the resolution desired.